West Virginia University,
MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

The School of Music

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Pre-medical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

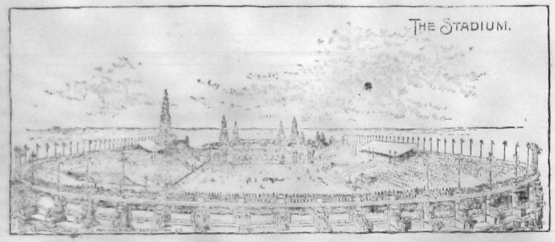
The Great Pan-American Exposition, 1901.

THE STADIUM.

The completed Stadium for the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next year will offer to the lovers of sports the most spacious and splendid arena ever erected in America. The Athletic Carnival to be held during the great Exposition will be the most notable in the history of American sport. The co-operation of many of the best promoters of athletic games and contests has been secured. Visitors to the Pan-American Exposition may therefore expect to witness the meeting of the most famous athletes of the world, in competition for prizes worthy of their best feats of endurence, strength, and skill.

It is said that the great Colosseum at Rome, built in the first century of the Christian Era, could accommodate 87. 00 spectators. The Pan American Stadium will be 129 feet longer and but ten feet narrower than the historic amphitheatre of Rome. The Stadium, however, will have a larger arena, and the seating capacity is estimated for 25,000 people. The top row of seats will be sixty feet above the ground, and every seat will command a perfect view of the vast interior. Standards are to be placed at various points for the support of awnings in such a way that they will not obstruct the view from the other seats.

The Stadium resembles in a general way that erected at Athens a few years ago, altho this one can be, of course, only a temporary structure. It is intended as a model of what it is hoped may be executed some day in permanent form.



THE STADIUM.

THE FALLS OF NIAGARA.

GREATEST AUXILIARY ATTRACTION TO THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

The importance of the great Falls, Rapids, and Gorge of the Niagara River as auxiliaries to the many and varied attractions of the Pan-American Exposition to be held in Buffalo, May 1st to Nov. 1st, 1901, can not well be overestimated. In its immense flow of waters, its grand scenery, and its historic lore, the Niagara is one of the most renowned rivers of the world. Its great cataract has defied the descriptive powers of poets and philosophers and baffled the delineative skill of painters and photographers. The grandeur of their environment renders the falls perenially interesting at all seasons of the year, and very few of those who visit the Pan American Exposition but will desire also to visit them. The trip from Buffalo can be made in half an hour. There are many points of view and places of interest and the visitor can plan his itinerary according to the leisure time at his disposal. If time will permit, the cataract should be viewed from both sides of the river and trips should be made the length of the Gorge, either along the cliffs above or over the trolley road which runs close to the water's edge.

Perhaps the most comprehensive near views of the Falls are those obtained on the Canadian side of the Gorge, especially that from Falls View station. Here is seen a complete panorama, embracing the rushing and turbulent currents of the upper rapids and the whole sweep of the falling waters, reaching from end to end nearly four-fifths of a mile, with the great Horseshoe Fall in the Foreground, separated by Goat Island from the American Fall, which is 158 feet high and 1881 feet wide.

On the American side there are two great corporations utilizing the current of the Niagara River for developing electric power used in many industries at the Falls. The power thus generated by one of these corporations is also transmitted to Buffalo, 25 miles distant, for use sor the electric lighting of the city, for operating a great electric car system, and in many important manufacturing establishments. The power thus transmitted will also be extensively used for the purpose of the Exposition.

Views of Life.

A great contrast is usually presented between the view of life entertained by a young man and that presented to an old man. The one is filled with the bright colors of hope; the other is tinged with the dark shades of sorrow and disappointment. Age in years does not regulate the character of the view, for some men remain young for a long time and others grow prematurely old. Much depends upon temperment, but more upon experience. The young and innocent have no cares of any kind; their books are balanced each day, and they have nothing to look too except the future, and that future appears bright to their imagination because they have had no experience that would suggest to them anything sad or sorrowful. As the years pass, however, each has his share of sorrows, and then the view of life alters. The future may still appear promising but not quite so bright as formerly. The shadows of the past creep into it, and as age increases the future loses interest. It has become altogether dull and commonplace. Happy the man who can preserve to the end a view of past life illuminated by good deeds, something that will take the place of the visions of future happiness which regaled his early years. To the young life is a great holiday, seemingly without end; to the old it is an experience sweet or bitter, as the case may be, from which the holiday element has disappeared. The views dissolve one into another, but not at rates regulated by the mere age of the individual and as those of the young are so much more enjoyable than those of the old, one should aim to prolong them as much as possible. This can be done only by leading a life of innocent enjoyment throughout maturity. Some men and some women manage to maintain their youthful spirits through sympathy with their children and even their children's children. Others become soured in early life. Their sufferings, deserved or undeserved, make them cynical; they are no longer agreeable companions and therefore lose the the associations which have the greatest influence in preserving youth and the hopefulness of youth—association with youth itself. The cheery old man is always surrounded by youthful companions; the morose man is deserted by those of his own age. But one cannot be either cheery or morose or cheery to order or at will. These are states of mind produced by a great number of influences. One who is to be cheery and hopeful must have a pleasant past to look back upon, a past that is free from wrong doing and illuminated by good deeds. And so also we may be quite sure that the dissatisfied or morose man has abundant reason for his disposition in conduct that has warped and twisted his view of life. We start in life with everything before us, nothing behind us; we end it in a good old age with everything behind us, nothing before us. The change is gradual, and we should aim by our conduct to make both views pleasant, that when we reach the middle period imagination may picture an enjoyable future out of the material furnished by an enjoyable past. Right living is the surest means of perpetuating the joys of youth. Only those whose backward view of life shows no shadows can preserve to the end the glorious spirit of youth which sees in the future nothing but happiness.—Baltimore Sun.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Two great Republican Conventions were held last week, one at Philadelphia and the other at Marlinton. It is the Marlinton one of which we wish to speak. There is no use in denying the fact that the Republicans had a large and enthusiastic meeting and showed determination to unite to elect a whole or part of the ticket. All day there were signs that the leaders were determined to take advantage of internal dissentions in the Democratic party in this county, and to our shame be it said that we have given them reason to hope

N. C. McNeil, County Chairman called the meeting to order and took advantage of this opportune moment to make one of those neat little addresses for which he is so famous. He referred to the fact that heretofore their conventions were merely perfunctory matters held in some small room in the town, where a handful of the faithful met, made nominations with no hope or thought of election, and adjourned. Now the largest room in the court house was filled to nominate a county ticket. In regard to the office of Representative especially the Democratic party had "fixed themselves." He stated the object of the meeting and called George P. Moore to the chair. Mr Moore made a short speech in regard to the necessity of there being two great parties, and gave the Democrats credit for honesty of purpose, but claimed for his party the faculty of being able to give the country the good government both parties desired, more effectually than the Democratic party. W. B. Sharp was made secretary of the meeting and nominations were in order.

The whole ticket was nominated in a cut and dried style, with the exception of the nominee for Representative in the Legislature. This resulted in a contest between B. O'Connel and S. B. Moore. Captain Walt Allen nominated O'Connel and Captain A. E. Smith immediately seconded S. B. Moore. Then followed a lot of speech making. Senator McNeel saw another opening for a neat little speech, and led off by nominating and seconding both men. He was absolutely impartial, [illegible] both names blessed, and referred to all the claims of both. He left them in statu quo. O. A. McKeever seconded O'Connell's nomination in a vigorous speech, and it was plain from the applause that O'Connel had a great deal of strength in the audience. The vote finally showed Moore 41 and O'Connel 63. Moore represents the old line Republicanism and O'Connel is a late recruit from the Democratic ranks. He went over to Palmer and Buckner in 1896, and broad is the road that leads from those men into the Republican party.

After this nomination the rest of the ticket was nominated in a harmonious manner. James Gibson, Jr., of Elk was put up for Sheriff; W. B. Sharp of Frost, a recent graduate of a Tennessee law school, was nominated for Prosecuting Attorney; our old friend Peter Hill of Jacox was nominated for County Court; G. E. Moore of Academy for Assessor.

TESTIMONY.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive: making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POYNTZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters in so good an institution of learning as the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J. SCHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

All the local players, including the strangers within our gates, are urged to meet at the Times office on Thursday evening at 7 o'clock to arrange for a team and outfit.

It is easy to see since the trees are leaved out what immense damage was done the forests by the great fires of last November. One might say that all the young trees were killed in the burnt districts, and where there are no large trees the mountains appear bald and brown for a great distance. It will be remembered that smoke from mountain fires made living almost unbearable in the late fall, the fires being the greatest and most widely spread in the history of West Virginia.

The Cherry Railroad.

In the rush attending the building of the Greenbrier Railway and the Coal and Iron Railway to meet it, very little general attention is given to the new railway projected to unite the Camden System and the C. & O. The new railroad starts at Cherry Bottom and comes up Cherry River until it reaches a gap which lets it over on the waters of Hills Creek in Pocahontas County. At this point there is a wonderful formation in that there is no perceptible divide between the waters of Cherry and the waters of Hills Creek. Up to this point the grade is easy and natural. Immediately after the waters of Hills Creek are reached the trouble begins for the engineer.

Hills Creek has falls 150 feet high and great difficulty is experienced in getting down to a level below them. This has been accomplished, but Hill's Creek unfortunately runs into and under Droop Mountain and makes that route no thoroughfare. The engineering corps at the present time are surveying for a tunnel underneath the mountain. Hills Creek comes through the mountain and is known as Locust creek. It is believed to be about a mile through the mountain as the creek runs. It is quite a large stream and the passage through must be quite large, but no one has ever had the hardihood to follow it through the mountain. No fish have ever penetrated the mountain either, for while Locust Creek has always been well stocked with fish no fish have ever been known in Hills Creek. The mountain is of limestone formation. In time of flood on the Hills Creek side the water has been dammed back until it formed a lake fifty or sixty feet deep.

Another route is to keep up on the Hills Creek side and cross over Droop Mountain and get down to the Greenbrier River by means of the Stamping creek valley.

The distance from the Greenbrier Railway to the Camden System is 31 miles by the route surveyed, but it is thought that a railroad can be built between the two in 28 miles. If this road be built it will open one of the richest timber sections in the country, all of which is practically a wilderness.

Circuit Court.

Circuit Court passed off very quietly. The town government had the desired effect of keeping down disorder on the part of those who have been accustomed to become too noisy and riotous by reason of too much drink.

There were two juries empaneled. The case of the State vs. W. D. Sharp resulted in an acquittal owing to an error in the writing of the indictment.

The case of Dawson vs. Smith and Whiting and others resulted in a verdict in favor of Smith and Whiting.

The case of A. M. McLaughlin vs. John T. McGraw was arranged by compromise.

The order of the Supreme Court dismissing the case of Andrew Herold vs. Amos Barlow was entered.

An order was entered to the effect that if the jail at this place was not put into a good sanitary condition by the next term of this court, then the Prosecuting Attorney is instructed to begin suit against the County Court to compel it to make the necessary improvements. Owing to the unsanitary condition of the jail, John Robinson who is confined therein on a charge of felony is ordered to be removed to the Greenbrier jail until the next term of this court.

DUNMORE.

Fatal Accident at Bower's & Co's. Camp. Other Items.

On Thursday evening at six o'clock Harvey Shanklin, aged 23, son of John Shanklin, a member of the firm of Bowers & Co., rail road builders, and a Greek laborer about thirty-five years old were engaged in loading a blast on the Greenbrier Railroad. They had placed five kegs of black powder, 125 pounds, in the hole. A negro laborer was sent for more powder. A rock was in the hole and young Shanklin tried to move it with a crowbar. A spark was struck igniting the powder. The unfortunate young man was immediately over the charge and was hurled at least sixty-five feet in the air and landed in the middle of the Greenbrier River. He was of course killed instantly. The Greek was close by. He lived until 1 o'clock that night but never recovered consciousness. A foreman near by named Williams received slight injuries. The laborer who had gone for the powder escaped. The rest or the working force were absent, havinß gone to supper.

The burial took place Friday at Dunmore, services conducted by Rev R. M. Caldwell.

Young Mr Shanklin bore an enviable reputation. He was very much liked by all who came in contact with him. The bereaved father and mother have the sincerest sympathy of the people of this vicinity. A very large crowd attended the funeral, among them 75 Greeks from the camps on the river.

ACCIDENTAL SHOOTING.

On last Thursday morning D. A. Tharp was accidentally shot with a pistol by J. E. McMillion, who picked up an empty pistol and after looking at it laid it down while looking at another one, and not knowing that the first had been loaded by a third party in the meantime, picked it up and it was accidentally discharged, striking Mr Tharp who was standing nearby. The ball passed through one finger and thumb and entered the left leg. The Doctor dressed his wounds but failed to locate the ball. He is is doing very well, being pretty badly hurt but not dangerously.

Contrary reports to this have been circulated but are false.

VOL. 18, NO. 50 MARLINTON, WEST VIRGINIA, JULY 5, 1900. $1.00 PER YEAR

West Virginia University,
MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

A NIGHT OF TERROR.

BY A. L. P.

'Twas the first winter month and in the mountains of the old Granite State December was wont to earn its name for cold and rigor. Halfway between the hill top and vale the L. family had an humble but entirely comfortable dwelling and everything within and out of the homestead betokened thrift and its twin sister—industry.

The family in question had gathered after supper around the ample hearthstone and many were the comments on barometrical changes evidenced by sharp gusts of wind and the pattering of icy snow upon the window pane. A whining at the door brought the dog Nero in*to notice and he was ushered in,* while Mr L. remarked that animals knew more and said less than all the scientific Weather Bureaus.

It was observed that one member of the family group remained unusually silent this evening and occasionally ceased from her loved knitting, an almost unheard of thing; for some of the younger children averred that "Aunt Elsie" knit all through the night—they left her knitting when they retired and at early dawn they found the needles still flitting between her fingers. There were many feet marked "L" that needed guarding from the cold and the "mother" was wonderfully helped by aunt Elsie's continuous knitting; but this useful woman did other things also and took her rest beside, as wise people ever do.

The weather and innocent gossip of the neighborhood being fully discussed and passed around, a novel subject was introduced by Philip, the half-grown boy: "Say, is it true, what I have read and heard spoken of, that human hair will turn white suddenly?" One member of the family declared it would, and gave several instances from history to this effect. Another doubted the truth of such records and the general opinion was in the negative. "Ask your aunt Elsie of the matter," said the mother, and while all turned to aunt Elsie for information she was silent and seemed distressed: then the children noticed for the first time in their lives that aunt Elsie's hair was a great deal whiter than her age justified, and their curiosity now aroused and supported by their mother's word, they exclaimed: "O, aunt Elsie, tell us, did your hair turn white in a single night like Queen Marie Antoinette's?"

"Have you not promised, Elsie, to tell sometime the story of your adventure and fright, and now is a good time, I think." I was the father who thus interposed, and great silence fell upon the group as aunt Elsie was seen to fold up her knitting work and accede.

"Long ago, children, during a winter like this and when I was young and gay like you, my home for the time-being was at an uncle's, in a part of the State entirely new to me. Word came past the middle of the day for some one of the family to assist relatives in distress and at once I was chosen for the emergency, and preparations begun to get me off quickly. Of course the traveling must be by sleigh for the bare ground had not been seen for a month. All day the cold had been increasing and a storm such as this to-night threatening. My escort on the journey was a young man hired for farm work and who thought he knew the country well; but a blinding bitter snow fall and wind might well perplex the truest mind. We had never heard of "blizzards" then: I think 'twas one that we encountered. Well wrapped in furs and shawls, with heated bricks at my feet and the [illegible] of a sleigh we started, and the cold started with us too, also the snow. Winter afternoons are short and this one the shortest of all. As the dusk gathered my companion showed signs of perplexity which I had been feeling for some time; but I was not a timid girl for had I been we would not have been on the road.

"Relaxing in the home my driver spoke thus, 'I wish I was to home!' 'Why?' said I. 'Because we be lost, that's all.' I made no immediate reply when the young man added, 'from Dan to Beersheba!' The connection of these words under the circumstances I was unable to discover; but I suggested our seeking a house by the way for shelter until the night, now fairly set in, should be over and we could get our bearings in the way. A glimmering light in the distance guided us, and at last we were glad to be under a roof.

"The family that so kindly took us in from the night storm and our *perplexed situation seemed to con*sist of two persons, a man and his wife. Mine hostess was talkative and as the exciting scenes of the road had robbed me of desire to sleep I was a patient listener; she carried me through her whole life, I believe, and all her troubles, reserving the greatest for the last disclosure, and well had it been for me if this grief never met my ears. 'My man and I have a child, an only son—poor dear boy!' and then she wept violently. 'Your boy is dead?' and my own voice became unsteady in presence of a mother's sorrow. 'Nay, young lady, not dead—it is worse than that.' A horrible surmise struck me for nothing was so awful as the loss of reason, and could it be, her son crazy? and perhaps here at home near his parents. Oh the wild tempest, the cold night outside and the unknown road were nothing compared with contact to the insane!

"And it was even so as the mother informed me speedily; but perceiving the alarm I could not hide added, 'He cannot hurt you; our poor senseless boy is tied and kept close: no one sees him and he sees no one.' Frightened, restless and unable to perform my part as guest I begged to retire, and was led up the bare stairs that creaked so to my step I imaginged the maniac boy was near at hand and would touch me. Opening one of the two doors at the upper landing, the lady said, 'You do not mind being in the house alone? We occupy the small building in the yard with our poor child!' Reproaching myself inwardly for my fear so selfish compared with the great affliction and thankless care and labor of these lone parents, I meekly answered, 'O no, I mind nothing, except—' and hastily added, 'Forgive me; I do thank you so much for taking us in tonight. I pray God to bless you!' 'Well, well, young lady, I see you are clean worn out and it is late. Good night, and try to go to sleep.'

"Sleep does not always or ever follow trying; the sweet restorer comes unwittingly, and when to me that night it was a feverish slumber, scaring my senses with the screams and jargon and aimless efforts of the mad. The rickety door of my apartment had no fastening, and evidently I arose while sleeping and crossed the narrow landing to the room opposite and lay down upon a bare lounge left with other things in a kind of lumber room. The window panes were mostly out and the cold air awak*ened me, but did not explain my* strange surroundings. Just then a sound from below froze my brain and stilled every effort to move from my position on the lounge where I seemed to have been spirited. The sound was the opening of a lower door and the clanking of a chain! Steps approached the stair and that terrible chorus of the chain steadily ascending. It was the maniac boy; it could be nothing else! He had escaped, and what was to become of me! Great horror seized upon me, tremulous, the cold sweat stood on my forehead, and I could not scream, which I essayed time and again. Night mares are thus described, but I was wide awake and horror stricken.

"As the chain and its bearer reached my door and entered I unwittingly 'let myself' and was dead to all other things. How long unconscious I know not and soon after reviving and treated gently by nursing friends, I refrained from asking any questions."

"But, aunt Elsie," said one of the interested and deeply attentive group at the fireside, "you found out sometime all about the matter, did you not? Please tell us the whole."

"Yes, my dears, I found the cause of my intense alarm imaginary as in ghost stories, but mine is not such; my story is real and the effect was serious. I remained ill, weakly and nervous for a long time and my once brown hair sensibly whitened, young as I was, until as you see it now."

"Aunt Elsie, you walked in your sleep to that other unused room; but what of the chain and the step?"

"That, my dear nephew, was only a large Newfoundland dog which had slipped his halter and was seeking as often, doubtless, before, the upper solitary room to lay him down and sleep; farthest from the mild animal's thoughts was the scaring of a human being almost to death." "Aunt Elsie" ceased speaking and resumed her knitting.

MAUD MULLER AND THE 'MOBILE

Maud Muller on a summer's day
Went out to rake the fragrent hay.

She glanced up toward the distant town
To see if the Judge was riding down.

Then she leaned upon her rake to rest
And a nameless longing filled her breast.

A blue fly buzzed around her and
Got smashed upon her soft white hand

Again she looked, and her round cheeks glowed—
A speck appeared far up the road.

Maud raked the hay with all her might,
Still keeping the growing speck in sight.

In his automobile the Judge sat proud
Leaving behind a thick dust cloud.

He'd never been out until that day
In the splendid thing, and his heart was gay.

O'er his features played a contented smile
As he ran over dogs in a lordly style.

Maud saw him come, and her hopes leaped high
As she dropped the rake, saying "My, oh my!"

Then she rushed where the cool spring bubbled up
And stooped to fill her little tin cup.

She sped to the road beside the lane
Where the Judge's [illegible] with the [illegible] had come

[illegible] glanced the rails and passed the sod,
While the Judge had been saying things to Maud.

On, on he came like a fast express!
She gave a hitch to the back of her dress

And straightened her hat and jabbed her hair
To be sure the frizzle and all were there
The Judge gave his gray mustache a twirl
And smiled as he saw the waiting girl,
And gazed at the sky as if wondering whether
The cloud in the west would bring wet weather,

And noticed the grass and flowers and trees
And the grazing kine as he cleft the breeze.

Then he grasped a handle some where at last,
To stop himself from going so fast:
But it seemed to stick and he gave a jerk
And seemed surprised that it wouldn't work!

And, in his hurry, he steered at Maud,
Who dropped her cup and yelled "O lord!"

And tried to climb the fence and got
Half way across, when, like a shot
From a cannon, the Judge arrived and went
On, after the manner of Gov. Kent.

* * * * * *

At last Maud rose from the wreck and gazed
Around at the scattered rails, amazed.
She saw the cows rush o'er the mead,
Developing awful rates of speed.
She heard hens cackle and people call
And then at last she remembered all.
Looking away o'er the fields, she saw
The undulating expounder of the law,
As he skipped the valleys and hit the hills,
Smashed the fences and jumped the rills,
Clutching her brow she sighed, "Ah me!"
Which the mock-bird echoed from his tree.

Then she took up her rake and mused awhile,
Saying "Blast the automobeel or byle!
Why didn't he stick to the sorrel mare?
Ah, where is he now!" Echo adswered "Where?"

Maud's rake is hanging unused today;
In a horseless age what's the use of hay
And oft in her palm she rests her chin
And thinks of the Judge and what might have been

If he only had stuck to the old mare's back—
Alas! Alas! Likewise alack!

NOTES BY THE WAY.

At old Millboro I passed an hour at the Sulphur Spring recently covered in by an elegant dome roof and enclosed by a picket fence, painted white. In the meantime Prince was turned loose to graze and he seemed to be more than satisfied until he lifted up his eyes and noticed a young lady holding a horse near the creek, a few hundred yards away, and he started for them. Upon calling to the young lady she came forward to check him, which she did by taking him by the bridle waited for me to come up, in the meantime while waiting she caressed old Prince very gently, which he seemed to appreciate very much. When I came up puffing and blowing from the race I asked her to see what trouble her charms had caused me. A blush and a smile beautified her features and in the most self-possessed manner replied: "Oh, well all horses love me." In an instant she had vaulted her own horse in clothes-pin fashion, and galloped away, presenting a most picturesque appearance in her riding habit, white bodiss, navy-bue skirt and summer hat trimmed in flowers that might allure the humming bird in its search for honey dew.

At the Warm Springs the sum*mer hat is to be seen in alluring* floral splendor. On a recent morning while a party of ladies were standing on the slated walk in merry conversation, a humming bird poised above them and sampled the flowers but finding no nectarine sweets, sped away like a flash of rainbow light.

Several localities in Rockbridge have been considerably injured by rain storms and freshets at intervals since May 28 and June 13. On June 12 the rain fall at Lexington in less than an hour was 2¼ inches, and was the heaviest down pour of rain for fifteen years. Side walks and gardens were considerably damaged.

The impression seems to be prevalent in Virginia that in the course of a year or two millions of dollars will be invested in Pocahontas county alone, to say nothing of what may be in store for Greenbrier and Randolph counties. So it seems one of the best ways to see ourselves as others see us is to take a trip from home. The only observation the writer feels equal to is, We shall see what we will see; and, All things come to those who wait, at the hands of hustlers. To the writer it is a source of regretful surprise, however to reflect that children of the pioneers who had been toiling, waiting and bearing the heat of the past days will have no more in hand than those who have come in at the eleventh hour, and possibly in many instances not near so much in the outcome.

Owing to rain and swollen streams in addition to and virtue of a cordial and pressing invitation the writer spent several June days in the charming Rockbridge home of Captain J. A. McNeel, once a widely known resident of our county. Mr and Mrs McNeel are the favored parents of four sons and three daughters, who are being faithfully trained up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and are children of much promise.

Col Wm. T. Poage, one of the most distinguished of Confederate artillery officers under Stonewall Jackson and successors, afforded the writer one of the most pleasant afternoons of his stay in Lexington by devoting himself to my personal entertainment. Seated with him in one of the nicest of buggies he showed us the city, moved slowly throughout the University and Institute grounds, and then selected one of the most eligible points of view to take in the boat race on the final stretch, and witness the enthusiastic demonstration of two thousand spectators at the crucial moment. Patiently and kindly Col Poage showed me through the Jackson memorial Hall with its many objects of interest. On the wall of the Library has been but recently hung a portrait of Stonewall Jackson, which is the only portrait that I have seen that reminds me of the manner of person Jackson was, as I remember him. For three years no one's form and features were more familiar to me than Jackson's, and this portrait presents him as I remember him with speaking fidelity, and in my estimation compared with this new portrait all others are [illegible] cartoons.

To persons of reflective habits but few scenes could be more impressive than those witnessed at Lexington during commencement exercises. When the Tucker Memorial Hall was dedicated the address made by President Wilson, Rector Strickler and Prof. Quarles were pervaded by sentiments eulogistic of a life first consecrated to personal piety towards God, then elevated statesmanship, and purest jurisprudence. The addresses impressively illustrated how essential all these characteristics are in the characters of those called to care for and promote the highest interests of our country and the homes of our millions of people The mind is filled with thoughts too deep for tears seeing our American youth receiving their deplomas, then going forth to their places in life's arena to perform the parts assigned them in their re*spective spheres of service,* as one fondly hopes, by Providential interposition and personal guidance. In the estimation of very competent and appreciative listeners the most masterly address of the current University series was that to the Alumni by Hon J. W. Davis, of West Virginia. Considered as to matter, manner and fitness of things this address deserves to be assigned rank with oratorical utterances. Like a voice in the wilderness it was a startling protest against the materialistic tendencies of the age that so seriously menace blood bought constitutional rights and forebode an imperial dynasty, having the form of liberty but denying the power thereof.

MARLINTON, THURS. JULY 5, 1900

TO THE READERS OF THE TIMES.

The business known as the Pocahontas Times has been reorganized and a new partnership formed of Andrew, Norman and Calvin W. Price, to be known as Price Brothers. The writer has been editor, printer, devil and general scrape-[illegible] in the running of this paper [illegible]arly eight years. He had [illegible] cast on these hospitableshores [illegible] learned law student, and the people showed an alarming tendency to search out lawyers of age and experience for consolation and advice. The paper was then bought and the same week we got a case in the justic's court. Since then we have posed before the public both as a lawyer and a newspaper man. But it is hard to serve two masters, and we knew sometime or other we would come to the parting of the ways. For the last year other work has prevented us from giving the paper much attention and it has been principally under the control of the editor's younger brothers, both of whom are first class printers and all-round newspaper men. From now on, the writer will give his undivided time if necessary to the practice of law, and only do such work in giving the county a paper as will not interfere with his duties as a lawyer, which in fact he has been doing all along. We expect to enlarge our paper in the near future, and will at all times endeavor to get out as good a paper as the field justifies. All country lawyers suffer from seasons of enforced idleness and at such times the writer will help in the office. Thanking you for your attention, I remain.

Yours very truly.

IN MEMORY.

BY A. L. P.

[Mrs "Josie" Brown, wife of Mr S. L. Brown, who departed this life in hope of Heaven, the 20th of June, 1900 at Marlinton, W. Va.]

I.

Sister, friend, Ah! she hath left us,
But 'tis God who hath bereft us:
And sorrow-full, we bow to him.
While bitter tears our eyes bedim.

II.

We thought that she was needed here—
Her home was bright, her friends were dear:
Age had not settled on her brow—
Her face, her voice seem with us now.

III.

"A little while," 'twas thus she spoke,
Ere yet life's silver cord was broke;
And it is so—a little while,
Until we reach life's latest mile.

IV.

And there are lonely hearts this way,
Who walked beside her many a day,
Until her hand slipped from their own—
The spirit from earth's hold had flown!

V.

To Heaven above, those mansions bright
Where comes no weary troubled night;
Sickness and pain forever fled,
And Death itself, thro' Christ, is dead!

OBITUARY.

Mrs S. L. Brown.

The sympathies of a wide circle of friends in this and other States have been profoundly stirred by the decease of Mrs Mary Josephine Brown, wife of S. L. Brown, clerk of Pocahontas County. This sorrowful event occurred June 26, 1900, at her home in Marlinton, after a prolonged and distressing illness, resulting from a baffling complication of chronic ailments, aggravated by an attack of the prevalent influenza, late in the winter.

Mrs Brown was a daughter of the late Randolph Slaven, of Huntersville, and was born near Green Bank. As a dutiful daughter, an affectionate sister, faithful wife, kind neighbor and exemplary christian in the pale of the Presbyterian branch of the church of Christ. She acquired a reputation not to be forgotten for long years to come on earth and be everlastingly remembered in heaven.

Among the many touching incidents transpiring during the final months of her life this is recalled: Several weeks before her decease her Heavenly Redeemer gave her "a song in the night" in this beautiful way. Upon awaking she found herself singing:

"I am thine, O Lord; I have heard Thy voice,
And it told Thy love to me;
But I long to rise in the arms of faith,
And be closer drawn to Thee.

"There are depths of love that I cannot know,
'Till I cross the narrow sea;
There are heights of joy that I may not reach,
'Till I rest in peace with Thee.

"Draw me nearer, nearer, blessed Lord,
To the cross where Thou hast died;
Draw me nearer, nearer, blessed Lord,
To Thy precious bleeding side."

Her departure was attended by all the consoling evidences that affords peace and comfort to all who believe that Jesus Christ died and rose again, and those that sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him.

One of the last sacred songs she wanted to hear was "Is my Name Written There." Her comment was "Yes, I know my name is on the page bright and fair in the book of my Savior's Kingdom. Yes, my name is written there." Her passion for sacred music, flowers and little children was intense, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

Her regret seemed to be mainly she could not remain with them to minister to their comfort. She seemed to be at a loss for words to express her heartfelt appreciation of all the care and attention shown her day and night during her sufferings. Her farewell message to her venerable father-in-law Wm. L. Brown, then too infirm to visit her, was touchingly filial, assuring him that with a daughter's love she would wait for him at the pearly gates and try to be the first to meet him, coming home at the Savior's bidding.

Gently as a tired child she fell asleep thus assuring us that Jesus can and does make the dying bed feel soft as downy pillows when we have faith in his promise lean our heads on his breast and breathe our lives out sweetly there.

Church Notes.

The Quarterly Meeting will be held at West Union next Saturday and Sunday, July 7 and 8.

Rev M. W. Atkinson will not preach at Marlinton next Sunday, as announced.

Greenbrier Presbytery met in called session in Lewisburg July 3. There were present ten ministers and two ruling elders. The calls of Green Bank and Dunmore churches and Marlinton and Huntersville churches to Revs H. W. McLaughlin and G. W. Nickel to be their pastors, were heard and their action approved by Presbytery. It appearing that Rev Nickel had submitted his resignation as pastor of his present charges in Monroe, to consider such resignation congregational meetings will held Sunday, July 8. Presbytery adjourned to meet in Ronceverte July 12, to hear reason, if any, why said pastorial relation should not be dissolved. It is hoped that by that time matters may have shaped themselves so that Presbytery may see clear to arrange for their installation as pastors of the above named churches.

About thirty-three years since the Chinese authorities founded schools of instruction at the Foo Chow arsenal, and secured foreigners for instructors. Highly recommended German, French and English professors were employed to instruct in ship building, in fortification, in the manufacture of arms and handling the same, and also in the English language. As a feature of English study the students were required to write compositions in English. When Dr T. E. Converse, editor of the Christian Observer, was in China, thirty years ago, he read one of these compositions which was as follows: "We are very glad to have the foreigners come here and teach us how to build ships and how to make guns and how to shoot, and when the foreigners have taught us how to make ships and guns, [illegible] the foreigners can go." [illegible] [illegible] is the trend of affairs in the present Chinese war.

GRASSHOPPER GLACIER.

Icy Tomb of Thousands of the Long-legged Insects.

There are many remarkable glaciers in that part of the Rocky Mountain uplift that crosses the southern border of Montana. A part of this region has hitherto been unmapped and its more elevated portions were unvisited and unnamed until last summer, when a geographical party piloted the way up the mountains and discovered some of the largest glaciers in the temperate regions of the western world. Here rises Granite Peak which, according to Mr. Gannett is the culminating point of Montana, 12,824 feet high.

Among the glaciers found in these mountains and recently described by James P. Kimball is Grasshopper Glacier, which derives its name from the enormous quantity of grasshopper remains that are found on and in the glacier. Periodically the grasshoppers that thrive in the prairie to the north take their flight southward and must needs cross the mountains. Their favorite route seems to be across this wide glacier, and in the passage scores of them succumb to the rigor of cold and wind, fall helpless upon the snow and are finally entombed in the ice. In the course of time billions of them have been the victims of this glacier. They are, of course, carried by the ice river down into the valley and deposited at the melting edge of the ice, and Mr. Kimball says that thousands of tons of grasshopper remains are the principal material at the lower edge of the glacier. We hear very often of rocks and sand as forming the terminal moraine of glaciers, but here is a glacier whose principal morainal material is grasshoppers.

These insect remains are washed out of the ice in furrows wherever the sun's heat has grooved the surface into runlets of descending water. The grasshopper's permeate the glacier from top to bottom. No fragment of ice can be broken so small as not to contain remains. Most of the insects have been reduced to a coarse powder, and the furrows of them washed out by the runlets and naturally disposed in parallel lines are very dark in color. —Omaha Bee.

MADE FROM DREAMS.

Inventors Can Tell of Some Strange Experiences.

"It is remarkable how ideas of an inventive nature occur to one," remarked Henry Hollingsworth, a Cleveland inventor. "Frequently when engaged upon problems in mechanics I have gone to bed and dreamed what seemed to be a perfect solution of that which had been uppermost in my mind during the day. But the trouble is that upon awaking, while recollecting perfectly that I had dreamed the solution, it was impossible to recall the details necessary to a practical application of my idea. You know, it is said of the automatic car coupler, of the double-jaw type, that the originator of the idea was a telegraph operator, who, while leaning back in his chair with his hands clasped behind his head dozing, was brought to his senses by the blowing of a locomotive whistle. That noise served as a connecting link for his thoughts. With his hands still clasped, sailor fashion, he slowly brought them around in front of him, and wondered why the cars of that train could not be connected with one another in the same way his hands were hooked together. As a result of this curiously suggested idea we have the almost universally used car coupler, the two jaws of which fit into each other and clasp after the manner of the human hands.

"There is a Western inventor who tells of dreaming of railroad spikes one night last summer. He saw around him nothing but spikes, hundreds and thousands of them, and tons and tons piled up in front of him. But these spikes differed from any other he had ever seen in that the four faces were grooved. He thought about those spikes when he woke up, and next night saw more spikes than ever in his dream. Then he became convinced that those spikes were intended as the foundation for the fortune that he had *been striving for. As a result the West*ern man has applied for a patent upon the invention, which it is claimed effects a saving of 20 per cent. in the steel used, and makes a cheaper and better means of holding the rail to the tie than heretofore employed."—Washington Post.

A Literary Policeman.

The news of the distressing death of Charles Ashton, the "literary policeman," as he was called, will be received with genuine regret throughout the whole of Wales. Mr. Ashton was one of those patient plodders so numerous in North Wales where there is much less of the rush and stress of life than in the southern portion of the principality. A child of the Eisteddfod, he had published an historical work under its auspices. But the dream of his life was to produce a complete and authoritative bibliography of Welsh literature. Amid the picturesque solitudes of Dinas Mawddwy, where the policeman's life ought to be a happy one and the most heinous crime is the absence of the owner's name from a cart, Mr. Ashton toiled year in and year out upon his task, corresponding with scholars everywhere who were interested in the vast body of Welsh literature and were happy to help him with notes and suggestions.—Birmingham Post.

Oldest Tree in the World.

The town of Kos, the capital of the small Turkish island of that name lying off the coast of Asia Minor, possesses the oldest tree in the world. Under its shade Hippocrates inculcated his disciples in his methods and views concerning the healing art 2,000 years ago. Tradition carries the age of the tree back to the time of Aesculapius (of whom Hippocrates was a lineal descendant), which would add some 600 years to its age. A great part of the trunk is built round, and there is a fountain known as Hippocrates Fountain. The circumference of the trunk is 30 feet, and there are two main lower branches, which are supported by masonry columns.

The railroad track is four miles this side of Falling Springs. The laying of track is temporarily suspended until the track already laid can be ballasted. The rails laid are taken from the main line which are replaced with the heaviest rails manufactured. The work on Locust creek bridge is not progressing very fast and quite a lot of grading is to be done. To an outsider it would seem that if the railroad reached Marlinton by October Court it will do well.

The engineer of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company is at the mouth of Leather Bark, laying off the ground for the immense sawmill plant to be erected there. There 140 houses to be built at once for occupation by the employees of the company. The big mill will be in charge of Mr Slaymaker, who is said to be a very public spirited man and who takes a personal interest in the welfare of the community in which he chances to be. Much is hoped for from the establishment of this big industry in the county. There is said to be as much as 50,000,000 feet of lumber on the waters of Leather Bark alone.

The poorest wheat crop harvested in the Levels in the memory of man is being taken off this week. The fly is the trouble. This troublesome insect is a fly nearly as long as the common house fly but much slimmer. It lays its eggs in the fall at a certain period and if there is any wheat up the eggs are deposited in the ground at the root of the stalk. The eggs hatch about the time the house fly makes its mysterious appearance in the spring, and the insect feeds on the stalk of the wheat until it is so weakened that it falls down. The fallen stalk may be well filled but the grains are shriveled. Much of it rots and the grass shoots up and makes it hard to harvest. In the Valley of Virginia formerly the farmers burned the wheat stubble and then [illegible] to kill out the pest but now it is thought that the scourge can be prevented by late sowing.

The Knapps Creek bridge is completed.

In the Randolph Republican Convention one colored gentleman John McDowell, of Beverly, had a seat as a delegate. He is the first of his race to be recognized by any political party in this way in Randolph County, and it is supposed that on that account most of the colored people in the county will vote the Republican ticket at the comigg election.—News.

The oldest inhabitant fails to remember any display of electrical phenomena surpassing what occurred in view of Huntersville Friday evening. A very dark and rugged cloud loomed just above the horizon from Buckleys Mountain to Browns Mountain which was illuminated by vivid flashes of *lightning so continuous and fre*quent as not to be counted, and this too for an hour or more. Some of the flashes were of exceptional brilliance and magnitude. The silence in the meantime was very profound, but for an occasionally scarcely audible echo of very remote thunder. After the disappearance of this magnificent electrical display towards the north another cloud came up from the southwest attended with rain, thunder and lightning. The very earth seemed to be shaken.

News from former Citizens.

News from absent friends widely known in our county is always pleasant.

J. W. Ervin, a nephew of the late James Ervin, of Jackson's River, near Warm Springs, Va., now a resident of Charleston, Arkansas, writes an interesting letter. From it we glean the following interesting item: "During the last winter of the war part of Wm. L. Jackson's command, of which I was a member, camped at Hillsboro. I belonged to the 19th Virginia Regiment. Capt Wm. L. McNeel and Capt. Jacob W. Marshall commanded Companies A and B of of the same Regiment. I was acquainted with Capt Marshall, brother Robert and sister Ellen in Glenville while a child. Miss Ellen was my second teacher.

Liquor License.

The county is infested with speakeasies all along the line of the Greenbrier Railroad from the top of Cheat to Droop Mountain. The liquor is hauled into the county with no attempt to hide the nature of the wagon load.

These resorts sell very mean whiskey at about $6 per gallon. There are the cause of a good deal of wretchedness. Young boys frequent the places, often spending Sunday there. They shelter behind a depraved condition of society. Many young men of our county have been taught to go in before the grandjury and swear falsely as to their dealings with these speakeasy men.

We have considered the question seriously and have reached the conclusion that this county is rotten ripe for licensed places. Until men are built like angels they will sell liquor, and it has reached that stage here that we cannot consider the state of society healthful. It is diseased in regard to this one thing and we must take bold measures to meet the evil.

Our idea is to grant liquor licenses for awhile to responsible men, place them under bond of $3-500 outside of incorporated towns, and twice that in such towns. Attack this bond if they ever sell to a minor, a drunken man or keep open on Sunday, and have brought the hidden disease to the surface teach our boys and young men the danger of the first drink, and let them learn to pass a saloon and guage it at its true value.

We are opposed to the traffic, always have been and always will but just now we would like to break up the secretive, degrading speakeasies with which the county is infected. We are ready to fight the devil with fire.

Camp No. 2, Horton, W. Va.

Grant Dickson, foreman for the Condon Lane Boom & Lumber Co., of Philadelphia, has a full crew of about 75 men. Boys from Pocahontas are I. B. Shrader, Alva Grogg and Harper Hudson.

Bark peeling is now the order.

Harry Lizier is our cook and a better cook never followed the woods.

Baltimore White is our lobby boy. He is well scienced with the gloves and can strike a blow that will send a man down and out.

Sam White, a professional boxer, with his comical and witty sayings, affords amusement for all the crew. Sam would drive the blues out of a bag of indigo with his comical sayings.

The writer would like to see Reddie Warwick come out and spend the summer among the spruce.

I. B. Shrader expects to go to the oil fields at Cairo, W. Va., soon.

BUCKEYE.

Mrs Addie McNiel, who has been suffering the ills of slow fever, is not improving as rapidly as we would like to see her.

G. D. McNeil will leave for the Capital City in a few days.

She present outlook for an interesting Sabbath school here this summer is rather flattering.

Prof Jasper says he is particularly fond of music, but this is no excuse for his going theere, for we all like music.

A drought is generally followed by rain. Picnics, white dresses and dry clover hay often bring changes in the weather.

Fool Bill Hoover is hitting the grit for Ronceverte, in pursuit of two loaded wagons.

We noticed a strip in last weeks issue signed Silly Sam. We have money to bet it was Mountain Rover. We are as familiar with his song as we are with "Home, Sweet Home."

O. W. Kellison is in from camp.

EAST FROST.

Rain, sunshine and heat.

Edward Mulinax expects to return to his home in Pendleton this week.

The postoffice is liable to be found on East Street some fine morning.

Somebody is trying to make it appear that A. L. Dilley is handling nothing but second hand goods. This is a willful falsehood. His goods are new, except the clothing line which is second hand. He sells so cheap that some of the people think he has stolen the goods.

Ben and Ernest Sharp are off to the Hot Springs this week.

*The singing at Mt Zion conduc*ted by C. K. Moore and A. L. Reed was fine.

Mrs Amanda Sharp has been on the sicklist for some days.

Cameron Curry, of Highland, is visiting in this part.

Herbert Reed passed through here one day last week enroute for Highland.

Miss Daisy Sharp and brother Merve were visiting friends and relatives near Green Bank last week.

The Republican Convention at Marlinton was all OK. Hurrah for our next State's attorney, W. B. Sharp!

CORN STALK.

DURBIN.

We are having plenty of rain and big water.

Dan O'Connel is driving the rest of logs. He has two large arks being built at the Chub Hole, opposite O. W. S. Gum's.

Clyde Beard has been scaling logs for O'Connel. We wonder if he saw any dogs.

Sandy Burner had the misfortune to get a cinder in his eye.

Mr and Mrs Willis Burner have returned from their bridal tour. A bountiful dinner awaited them at home, and they and their friends partook of the good things and the old gobbler.

Keep your eye on the next wedding; it's in sight.
